Historical Overview

The McLean County Association for Home and Community education found its origin in 1918 by the efforts of (Mrs. Spencer (Hazle Buck) Ewing; petitioning the sitting Illinois Secretary of State Louis Lincoln Emmerson. Her request was met with a charter recognizing the, “McLean County Home Improvement Association,” as a coordinating committee with the United States Department of Agriculture and University of Illinois extension, tasked with community betterment through educational programs centered around family life.

Early educational packets provided to members provided information on crop development, food preparation, furniture construction and a variety of other home development projects. By 1920, Mrs. Ewing had begun a campaign to expand the membership of the association, traveling to various townships with the intent to garner fifty members from each. A rousing success, Mrs. Ewing effectively increased the McLean County Home Bureau Association to a prodigious size, forming individual township clubs known as “units.” As membership grew, so did ideas for more community outreach programs; as did the apparent need for a new name for the organization presumably. In 1920 the original character would be re-submitted to the Illinois Secretary of State requesting a name change, resulting in the formation of the McLean County Home Bureau. A similar result would occur twice over: Once in 1962 with the change to the McLean County Homemakers Extension Association (HEA), and again in 2001 changing the name to its current moniker, the McLean County Association for Home and Community Education (HCE).

Presumably, the frequent name changes for the association were due to an ever-increasing membership, as the organization continued to coordinate specialized education programs with their respective communities. The HCE did this through careful coordination with partnering county boards along with the efforts of their various officers and members. Educational projects and presentations frequently shared vital information about public health and community safety. These presentations culminated into frequent banquets and events to be held with HCE members and individuals within the community. However, the HCE continued their long tradition of home development, often publishing recipes and other articles related to the domestic environment. A variety of members also worked closely with the Pantagraph, with the intent to provide useful information to the public and announce their frequent events. The educational information provided by the HCE finds itself in a broad purview of public wellness and many special events were formed to reflect this, including: International nights, disaster preparedness, childhood safety and development, public health, and even simple vocational workshops. For some time the HCE also included itself in formulating a process for recognizing community members as, “Great American Families,” creating articles in local papers displaying the family and featuring their various successes.

In 2018 the HCE continues to operate as a community outreach organization, finding its members affiliated with such associations as: the Illinois Association for Home and Community education (IAHCE), the National Volunteer Outreach Network (NVON), Country Women’s Council, USA (CWC), and the Association Country Women of the World (ACWW). Membership remains open enticing new members to join with promises of good food, and a better community.
